SAN DIEGO (KABC) -- A San Diego high school teacher was arrested Thursday after allegedly attacking one of his students, prosecutors said.San Diego police said that on April 9, Joshua French, a high school social studies teacher at Cesar Chavez High School, was arrested after allegedly violently attacking one of his students.He was charged with one felony count of corporal injury to a child in connection with the incident.According to the criminal complaint, French grabbed the student by the throat, pulled him to the ground, and punched him in the face, causing swelling and redness around the student's eye.The student then left the school on his own and was taken to a local hospital.The alleged assault was captured on surveillance video, according to police.Police said the boy was able to identify French in a photo lineup.French was booked into the San Diego Central Jail and released after posting a $25,000 bond.Q: How to set default window manager when using X11 and Wayland? I want to set different parameters for my desktop environment than usually but I don't know how to set defaults for this. I tried to search for answers. In current Ubuntu 18.04 I have old version of some packages which set default parameters. I know that wayland is supposed to be better but still, I am not sure how to change default parameters here. In Wayland I tried to set, for example, WaylandEnableMultiuser=0 with wlctl command. A: Xorg and Wayland have different preferences. wlctl can set Xorg settings, but not Wayland ones. Since there's no Xorg in Wayland, you can only use Wayland settings from binaries under /usr/bin. The default settings for Wayland have already been preconfigured and don't need to be adjusted. There is no way to "set default parameters" for Wayland, only turn off some of them. If you really want to change the settings, you can run the following command xset q | grep -i wa and see

Each CRC site is a consortium of three or more colleges or centers of excellence. The UofP-CRC is the largest of the UofP-CRC sites in terms of research and clinical volume. Its research interests include early detection and prevention of pediatric cancer, translational research, and innovative therapies. Its clinical interests include oncology, hematology/oncology, gynecology/oncology, neurology, and surgery. It is a member of the National Pediatric Soft Tissue and Skeletal Oncology Consortium, the National Pediatric Surgical Consortium, the National Cancer Institute's Pediatric Early Clinical Trials Network, and the Consortium of Pediatric Hematology/Oncology Centers (CPHC). In addition, it has collaborated with the University of Pittsburgh Cancer Institute (UPCI) as a member of the UPCI Oncology Research Network. The UPCI is a pediatric-oriented cancer center that is part of the UofP's academic health science center. UofP is the second largest cancer research enterprise in the region. Its research activities include basic and translational studies in cancer and related fields including genetics and molecular biology. UPMC is the largest health system in Western Pennsylvania, and is one of the top 10 in the country. Its research activities focus on cancer prevention and early diagnosis. Its research interests include evaluation of biomarkers and the implementation of practice guidelines. The proposed CRC will capitalize on the strengths of the UofP, which is particularly well- suited to translation science, and of UPMC, which is especially well suited to the evaluation of health services.
